The Challenge	Why RightFit
Growth Without a Marketing Team Like many accounting firms, Varney & Associates had grown successfully for years without a formal marketing department. Marketing responsibilities lived with the firm's HR Director and were primarily focused on employer branding and occasional social media posts. While this approach helped maintain visibility, it was not driving firm growth. The leadership team began to notice a concerning trend: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Their website was not generating meaningful leads• Social media activity was not translating into new client conversations• There was no clear system for attracting new, right-fit clients As Varney looked ahead to continued growth, it became clear that relying on ad-hoc marketing efforts was no longer enough. Strong firm. No clear marketing system to support growth.	A Partner, Not a Hire Varney considered hiring a full-time marketing professional. But that path created new challenges: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Finding someone who understands the accounting industry• Training them on the firm's strategy and services• Managing execution across website, SEO, content, and social media• Pulling time from already busy managing partners RightFit offered a different approach. Instead of building a marketing department from scratch, Varney partnered with RightFit as a fractional, end-to-end marketing partner. They needed a partner who: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Understood accounting firms• Could move quickly• Could execute without requiring heavy partner involvement• Had proven systems for website strategy, SEO, content, and lead generation RightFit gave Varney immediate access to the tools, expertise, and implementation support they needed — without the time, cost, and risk of hiring internally.

What This Means for Other Managing Partners

Varney's results did not come from hiring more people internally.

They came from having the right partner implement proven systems.

If your firm:

- Knows marketing matters but does not have a marketing team
- Relies too heavily on referrals and word-of-mouth
- Wants more right-fit clients coming through the website
- Feels overwhelmed by the idea of hiring, training, and managing marketing staff
- Needs implementation without adding more work to partners

This is exactly the problem RightFit was built to solve.
